

Pandemic Led to Poor Recruitment Sentiment in Securities Industry Securities Association Coordinates Members to Offer Internships for Graduates

Hong Kong, 4 July 2020 — Dr. Gordon Tsui Luen-on, Chairman of Hantec Group and of the Hong Kong Securities Association, today announced the launch of his new book entitled “A Rookie’s Guide to the Securities Industry” (《職場「徐」意門 ~離開新手村》). Drawing from the vast experience Dr. Tsui has amassed in the financial services industry, the book gathers useful tips for fresh graduates to ‘survive’ in the workplace, ranging from must-have attitudes to the bad habits that should be eliminated.

On the occasion of the book launch, Dr. Tsui alluded to the difficulties faced by university graduates as securities firms have been hard hit by the pandemic. “I am particularly worried whether the current batch of graduates can land a suitable job. As they lack work experience, they become even more vulnerable in economically sluggish times like these,” Dr. Tsui said.

In response, the Hong Kong Securities Association has garnered support from several securities firms in offering 15 internship positions. “The Association is determined to help graduates acquire work experience, strengthening their competitiveness in their ongoing career path,” Dr. Tsui commented.

Students are welcome to take part in the recruitment talks held by the Association within local universities, where they can learn from industry practitioners and better prepare themselves ahead of embarking on a career in the field.

“A Rookie’s Guide to the Securities Industry” (《職場「徐」意門 ~離開新手村》) is published by Hong Kong Open Page Publishing Company Limited, and is on sale now at local bookstores.
